Myra Savant Harris is not a veterinarian but a retired registered nurse who spent many years as a labour/delivery and neonatal ICU RN assisting with literally hundreds of human births. Why was it then that she was very intimidated by the process of whelping her first few litters of puppies? During conversations with other dog breeders it seemed that everyone shared the same fears. Although her bitches could not verbalize anything to her as her human patients could, she started to figure out that those same bitches had lots of information to give her.

This seminar will follow closely the information she has written in her three books. Topics will include the basics of breeding, artificial insemination, reproduction problems, whelping advice, C-sections, diet, progesterone levels, and setting up a puppy intensive care to just name a few. This seminar is for all dog breeders whether you are just entering the arena or have been whelping litters for many years.
