Unlike many traditional dog sports, herding is a world unto itself. You picture your dog quietly gathering the sheep in response to your whistled directions, he gives them the 'eye' and then runs the sheep toward you stopping just as the sheep reach your side. Ahhh! This is Herding!!

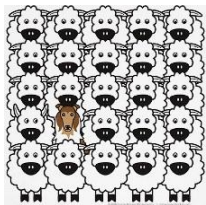

Then reality sets in. You go to a class and herding is filled with terms that you never heard in the 'regular dog world'. You are told you are stepping in your dog's eye even though you are 10' feet away. The word 'pressure' takes on new, and very important meaning. Sheep run amok and ducks take flight while your dog dashes around like a madman ignoring your commands. You can't think fast enough and your dog can't slow down. Discouraged, you head for home and go back to more traditional sports like agility. At least the A-Frame doesn't move in the middle of a class! And heck, everyone understands what a tunnel is!

But herding does not have to be that way!

Kathy's clinics are designed to introduce you to the Wonderful World of Herding. Commands are explained and the desired actions are demonstrated. Herding is put into perspective from the dog's point of view by having the handler work the stock. Tools are explained and attendees learn how to use them. Dry work, a concept honed to perfection at Tee Creed is demonstrated so that students can then go home and teach their dogs everything they need to know before every stepping foot into the herding field.

Best of all, Kathy not only knows how to train 'other breeds', she owns them! No dog is expected to work like another dog and there are no 'cookie cutter' training methods used.

So if you are thinking about herding or have started herding and find yourself lost, come to a Herding Clinic with Kathy Warner and unlock the Mystery of Herding!
